II. Catalog Description

Prerequisite: PSYC103 Introduction to Psychology. This course examines major theories and empirical findings in psychological research on gender. Specifically, the nature, psychological consequences, and perpetuation of stereotypes and gender differences will be considered from a feminist perspective. This course will contribute to raising students’ awareness on how gender differences manifest themselves in the entirety of women’s existences, including childhood, relationships, work, as well as physical and mental well-being. Students will learn to think critically about gender issues as they are considered and depicted in academic and popular media.
